Beijing, China
By Alex Jackson

May 14, 1989 Chinese students gathered in Tian An Men square for a demonstration because of the Treaty Versailles. After a week of demonstrating some of the students went on a hunger strike because the students wanted democracy.

A little while after that the Chinese Government wanted all the students out of the square but none of them would leave. The Government started to get really impatient and decided to send in the Chinese police to clear out the students because the Russian Government was coming to see the Chinese Government. The Chinese Government wanted his country to look good from the time of the Russian Governments arrival till his departure. However the students did not want to leave the square because they wanted democracy and they where not going to leave until they got it.

The Chinese Government tried to get the students out of the square by sending in the Chinese Police, but the students kept the police out of the square by making barricades out of turned over bus and other things they could find.

After many tries by the Chinese Police to get the students out of the square the Chinese Government decided to bring in an army from out of town to clear out the square.

Chinese army troops tries to clear the square!

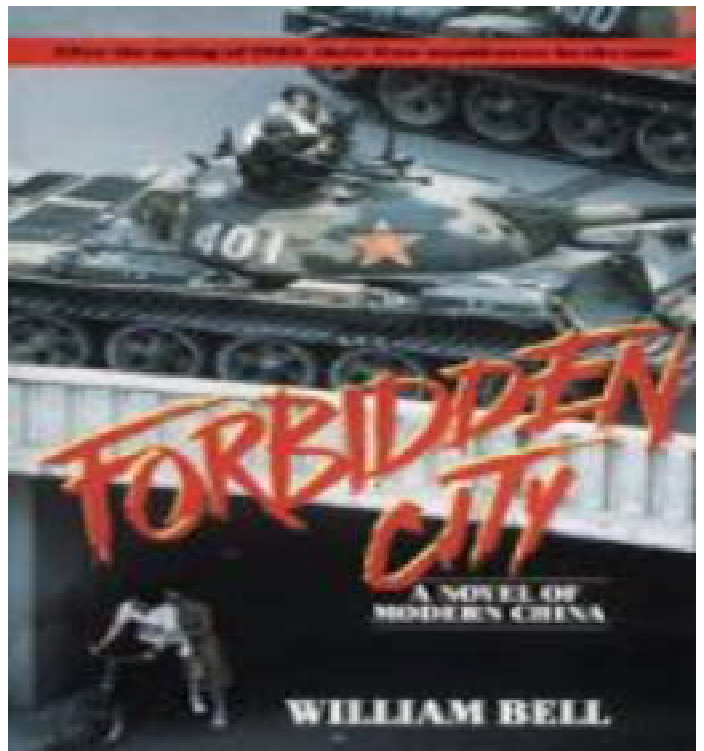

After many tries by the Chinese Police to get the students out of the square the Chinese Government decided to bring in an army from out of town to clear out the square.

They brought AK47's and they would bring trucks filled with army troops's that would shoot people at random.They also had tanks to corner all the students in the square and then they would begin to start shooting the students in a sort of a dominos pattern. They would start in the front and then work their way to the back.

The Chinese Government tried to keep all the information about the massacre but people are getting tapes from the reporters to get them out of China and to a news station out of the county. Since people have being getting all the information out of the county the Chinese Government has been denying all that has happened with the massacre. People as faraway as Canada have already gotten information about the massacre.

The real question is how could they kill innocent people??
What has happened here only history can tell, What will happen only time

This is my story of China and the Beijing Massacre.
