By Lance Goodwell

In the Tian An Men square on May 4th students from the University of China were protesting because of democracy, the death of Hu Yaobang and corruption in the government.

The Tian An Men Square

On June 4th, the Peoples Liberation Army started killing by throwing tear gas and shooting the protesters because the President of Russia was coming and China didn't want to make other peoples think that China was a bad country. China didn't want any other country to find out that this was happening and so they wouldn't let anyone out of the country.

A young boy named Alex and his dad Ted Jackson came to China earlier in the year because Ted was a reporter his job was to go to China for the year. Alex would go to the square during the day and take photographs and film of the things that would happen.

While Alex and Ted were there the protesters started to protest and all these things happened. Alex got most of it on film.

Ted and Alex got separated but by the middle of the year they reunited outside of Beijing and wanted to get out of China, and fast.

Alex and Ted snuck all this information out of China in their suitcase on their way back home. When they got home they quickly went to show these non-edited films and photographs to the police. Soon all the information was out of China and in the media.
